Men's Rowing

Bates Rowing provides an environment in which teamwork thrives and student-athletes dedicate themselves to one of the most rigorous and rewarding sports on campus. Bates College has taken great strides to support the belief that academic and athletic excellence must coexist as part of a quality liberal-arts education.

The rowing program reflects this notion, by offering dedicated student-athletes an opportunity to contribute to a nationally recognized NCAA Division III varsity program, while receiving a first-rate education. Bates rowers take athletic competition seriously and pursue it with the same uncompromising energy that they approach their academic and career goals. The team's dedication to this high standard of performance is the foundation for the continued success of the program.

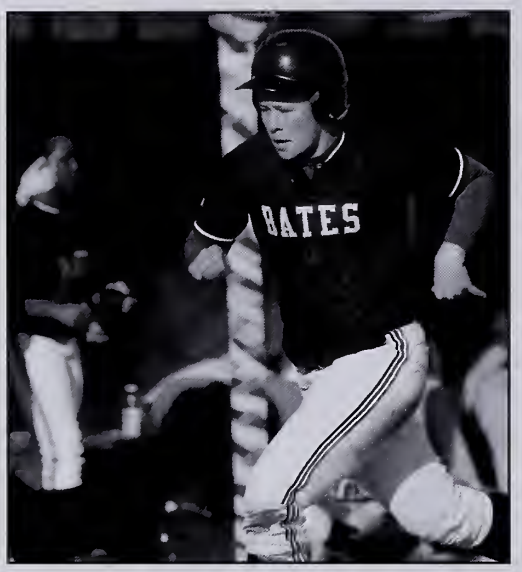
Noah Gauthier captured his first All-America award at indoor nationals in March when he placed eighth in the 35-pound weight throw. He becomes the 11th Bates man to win All-America honors in the hammer throw, and the first since Scott Cooper '05 in 2004. Gauthier also becomes the Bobcats' first outdoor All-American since Joe Northrup '05 in 2005.

Softball



Bates College softball players Katie Franklin and Stacia Saniuk were both named to the all-conference team by the New England Small College Athletic Conference. It is the third straight year that Franklin, a senior outfielder from New Preston, Conn., has been voted all-conference. Franklin made the First Team in her sophomore and junior years.

It is the second time in as many years that Saniuk, a sophomore catcher from Sharon, Mass., has made Second Team All-NESCAC. She was also named NESCAC Rookie of the Year in 2006.

Franklin, a team co-captain, led all Bates regulars with a career-high .406 batting average, a .474 on-base percentage and a .625 slugging percentage. She shared the team lead in home runs with Saniuk with three, and she drove in 16 runs while starting in all 24 of the Bobcats' games. An excellent center fielder, Franklin committed only two errors, and four in her entire career. She owns Bates' single-season records in extra-base hits (19) and doubles (14).

Bates Ballroom Society

The Bates Ballroom Society is an organization run by students (and open to any faculty or staff who would like to attend) for anybody who has an interest in learning to dance. No matter what your level of experience is, you can come and enjoy yourself while learning to dance to anything from the Salsa, to the Tango, to Swing. The level of each individuals participation is up to him/her (no partner necessary), but if you come to all the meetings you can receive PE credit, since by its very nature this club is an active one. Alternately, if you are interested in committing yourself to becoming a better dancer, you can join the Competition Team, which is affiliated with the club and provides more in-depth lessons.

Francophone

THE FRANCOPHONE CLUB was created to help students explore different aspects of francophone culture at Bates. It will provide an opportunity for francophone students to meet, speak French, and discuss topics concerning francophone countries. The Francophone Club, however, will in no case exclude non-French speakers since conversations are always held in English, and occasionally French. Since its birth, the club has focused on showing French movies followed by rich discussions, as well has cooking classes, and various other cultural activities. It will, consequently, continue along this path, initiating student gatherings like these. The ambition of the club is also to organize conferences and meals to promote the discovery of French food, to encourage discussions, and last but not least, to make possible some trips to the closest francophone country: Quebec. The Bates College Francophone Club serves to satisfy the desire of the students in this community for an acquaintance and knowledge of the Francophone countries through active participation in cultural, academic and social functions.

"The 2006 season proved to be one of the most intense rugby years in recent history for Bates. The Bobcats won the CBB championship for the first time since 1998. The season highlight was the bobcat's complete domination of Bowdoin in a 29-13 win. The Bobcats also played in the post season for the first time in several years after narrowly missing the playoffs the previous two seasons. Although the cat's fell short in the playoffs the young team should keep Bates competetive for years to come."

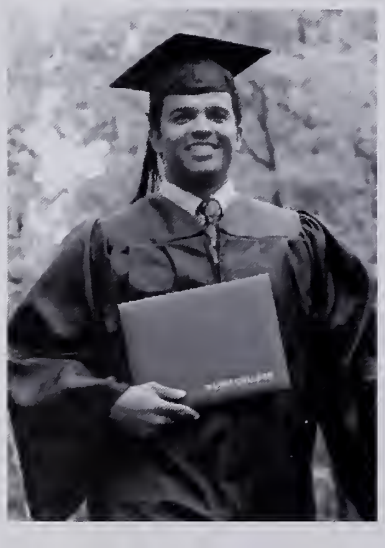
GRADUATION



Bates

Baccalaureate Address

"Building at Bates," by President Elaine Tuttle Hansen

The theme of your Baccalaureate ceremony "seasons" offers us a wonderful metaphor for celebrating the natural process of change that you have experienced over the last four years. Since fall of 2003, you have changed, the world has changed, even the Bates curriculum largely unmodified for the previous quarter century has changed.

And most visibly, over the course of the last few months, the physical appearance of an important part of our campus has changed. In the midst of this season of steel and brick, I see another wonderful metaphor to explore today: architecture and building as analogues for the design and development of a life, and particularly the fabrication of well-educated graduates of a great liberal arts college. For the Class of 2007, I offer seven ways of reflecting on this comparison.

First and most obviously, in both construction and educational development, we belabor the foundations. All last summer Rand Field was a muddy pit on which nothing seemed to be happening, and the first thing that appeared in constructing the new dining Commons was a big hole in the ground. But in this all-important foundational stage, before the visible edifice arises, the builder takes care of underground steam and sewer lines, stormwater catch basins, and other things we rarely notice again, unless they go wrong. The more ambitious the structure, the firmer the substructure must be.

St. Augustine underscores this aspect of our metaphor when he speaks of building a virtuous soul: Do you wish to rise? Begin by descending. You plan a tower that will pierce the clouds? Lay first the foundation of humility. For many years, you have been laying your deepest foundations. Today is the culmination of two decades of an ambitious effort to establish basic habits, fundamental skills and well-grounded principles of mind and soul that will support you every day of your life. You wont think much about their underlying existence, but with these in place, you are ready to do great things.

Second, to make something beautiful, to create something new, it is, unfortunately, often necessary to make a mess, and to destroy something old. Right now the construction sites at Bates are ugly: chain-link fences, heavy machinery, porta-potties, rubbish heaps, dusty ruts and forlorn stumps. Men in hardhats with bulldozers have obliterated part of the world we were used to and loved.

As you emerge from Bates today, by contrast, your appearance is sleek and polished and beautiful; your creative thesis is neatly printed and bound. But in getting you and your intellectual life to this point, you have all gone through untidy moments; you may have had to destroy some things, you may have lost others. While you pause to enjoy your completion of the B.A. or B.S., it is important to remember that you are never finished making a mess. At every stage of the self-fashioning that has come before and lies ahead, the old almost always begrudges the new; seamless, painless transition is rare.

Third, the history and development of our college infrastructure involves planning, programming and design processes so complex that its impossible to say exactly when they actually began or who is responsible for them. Was the new residence hall born the day I signed a contract to undertake a comprehensive Campus Facilities Master Plan, or the day a committee approved the schematic design, or the day the contractors broke ground? Or does it in fact go back further, even all the way back to the Freewill Baptists who, in scorning fraternities and sororities, established some particular principles of residential living that emerge today in aspects of our plan?

So too many years of planning on the part of many people shaped your life before and at Bates. Think about the parents and grandparents who gave you good genetic material, the families that raised you, the teacher or friend or guidebook that first pointed the way to Lewiston, the framework of interests and attitudes you fashioned in high school, and the generous funding of the last four years, whether from an unknown Bates alum or an industrious parent or a rich uncle. Since it is impossible to say exactly when your identity as we know it today started, or who is responsible, it is a good day to thank everyone, known and unknown, for their part in raising your accomplished, promising self.

Fourth, great architects have grand visions. They keep their eye on the big picture; our architectural consultants began by showing us broad strokes and rough sketches. And indeed, Design informs even the simplest structure, as William Strunk and E.B. White observe in another context: You raise a pup tent from one sort of vision and a cathedral from another. So it goes in forming a life. How often have you floundered because you didnt know where you were going in a paper, a project, a relationship?

But fifth, the devil is in the details. The building cant just look good, it has to "work good." If you have ever lived in a room where someone put the electric outlets in the wrong place, you know why we spend so much time and effort in construction projects thinking about the smallest item, checking and double-checking. So too in any life some exciting grand scheme may be foiled by a minor problem, a minute wrinkle, a mere small matter. You have to have big guiding ideas and principles, but you also have to care deeply about detail, accuracy, precision.

Sixth, while a site is under construction, it is hard to tell what the finished product is going to look like, although some rush to judgment. I had an e-mail from a member of the Bates community at an earlier stage of the work on Rand field expressing concern that we had chosen to build a dorm out of concrete block. My own sense of how this is all going to look has changed frequently, depending on where we are in the process. I assume, furthermore, that even when the residence hall and Commons are built and we are using them on a daily basis, they will continue to evolve, and really only the test of time will tell us whether they are good buildings or even great buildings.

Caps and gowns may conceal that you too are unfinished. You still have a lot of growing to do; you will evolve, and your greatness will emerge only over the course of many years. I hope you will remember that about yourself and others before passing judgment, before declaring victory or admitting defeat.

Seventh, the design and appearance of a building is more than lines and shapes; any structure reflects and expresses values. Why is the new dining Commons so big, and what does the large open size of its central eating space say? Why is the ceiling made of recycled wood? Why does the fireplace lounge have moveable walls for displaying artworks? Each of these elements represents a careful choice, based on what we told the architects about our principles and aspirations. We want to be a richly diverse group of individuals, but we also want to come together daily to eat and socialize in one space. We care about sustainability. We invite the provocative, even the outrageous, but we think they should occupy a place that people enter because they consent to the educational value of being provoked and outraged.

So too the most mundane things you do express the values and goals you have consciously and unconsciously adopted. Your education has made a difference not only to the facts you know and the skills you have but also to what we usually think of as your character.

It has been my joy and my privilege to serve as president during an important phase in the construction of the Class of 2007. On the bedrock of a Bates education, may you build enduring and inspiring lives.

Attitude is the master key to life's little locks.

If you think you are beaten, you are;
If you think you dare not, you don't;
If you want to win but think you can't,
it's almost a cinch you won't.
If you think you'll lose, you're lost;
For out in the world we find success begins with a fellow's will;
It's all a state of mind.
Life's battles don't always go to the stronger and faster man,
But sooner or later the man who wins is the man who thinks he can.

In To Kill a Mockingbird, Harper Lee tells us through Scout the meaning of service: "Neighbors bring food with death and flowers with sickness... and little things in between. Boo was our neighbor. He gave us two soap dolls, a broken watch and chain, a pair of good luck pennies... and our lives. But neighbors give in return. We never put anything into that tree, we have given him nothing, and it made me sad."

In your short life, Jenny, you have filled that tree and dedicated your service to those less fortunate.

BATES

Dear Bates Mirror Readers,

This academic year was my first year as the Bates Mirror Editor in Chief and my third year as part of the yearbook staff. At the end my Bates career I have to say that, even though editing the yearbook requires a lot of patience and commitment, I am glad I have had the opportunity to be one of those individuals able to record a small portion of our school's history and of our student life.

The completion of this Mirror 2007 edition was made possible by an amazing yearbook staff: Marissa Chen, Christine Chin, Tanya Savrimootoo and Rachel Warner. You all did an excellent job! I would also like to acknowledge our Mirror advisor, Professor Gene Clough, who has guided and helped us enormously over this past year. As well, an important role in this edition have had a few of my very best friends, who have helped me finish all the 'Bates Mirror Cards' by working together with me most of the night before Senior Dinner. Hence, special thanks to Jaleh Taheri, Lars Olofsson, Monique Brown, Selina Jaber, Mohammed Awartani, Chris Alfaro, William Walsh, Sami Qarmout, Ilham ElHamoumi Rostoum, and Tanya Savrimootoo.

A few other people have played an important role in this edition. Thank you to Cole Harris, Ryan Shimala and Sandy Moses, our Jostens representatives for their continuous help. Many thanks to Dean Keith Tannenbaum, Jay Burns and Phyllis Jensen for all the wonderful pictures they provided us with. For the second year, thank you to Tobe Okoye for the excellent drawings he provided us with for the title pages. Thank you to Mark Maserjian at Portrait Imaging for photographing our large senior class.

Last but not least, I would like to thank the students and their parents. The pictures and parents ads we have received from all of you made this yearbook possible. I hope you will enjoy this edition!

Best wishes to all the graduating seniors and to all the students who will be continuing their education at Bates College the years to come.

Thank you to Bates College and to everyone I have met in my search for an education.

Sincerely,

Sorina Ioana Crisan
